

About the Indy Hunger Network

Indy Hunger Network (IHN) is a collaborative organization made up of representatives of leading anti-hunger organizations and corporations in the Greater Indianapolis area. By working together, we make the systems that feed the hungry more efficient and effective. Our focus is on improving access to food, improving the nutrition of the food supply, and increasing the sustainability of the hunger relief system in our area.

Specifically, we:

- Foster collaboration and build on the capabilities of the major food-providing community organizations, encouraging public support of them
- Identify key opportunities to make the food system work better for hungry people
- Establish projects to make improvements
- Serve as advocates
- Monitor health of overall food system
- Create awareness of hunger and how to address it
